The intimation is thrown out from time to time that there will be trouble in our church over religion—that there will be a split in the church. The time was when threats of secession and rebellion had an intimidating effect, but not now. The Presbyterian church will go forward in strict obedience to the constitution and laws of the church. It will follow the method provided in the constitution for its own amendment—which being done, whatever the result, yea or nay, all Presbyterians will agree to make it unanimous.—The Insightly gap in that prominent and busy mous. - The In-

He is now or was recently in Palestine, and certain newspapers of this country are publishing sermons that, their readers are informed, were preached at various places in the holy land on the Sunday previous to their publication. And one reading these sermons, not knowing the facts in the case, gets the impression that they were taken to the places named and sent by cablegram to the places named and sent by cablegram to the papers. LA GRIPPE SPREADS.

The Ideas of Some of the Leading Physicians.

THEY ALL ADVISE GREAT CARE.

Disease is More Dangerous Than is Popularly Supposed-There is no Preventive-Look Out.

"In la grippe's grip" is a very familiar sound at the present time.

"Don't you think, doctor, that a great nany people are home ill who would never have been there had they not read so much about the disease and the havec it is playing in the east?" This was the query put to a prominent Salt Lake physician yesterday, and the following was the answer given: lowing was the answer given:

"I have no doubt but that the many fatal results of the disease in the east have had a tendency to frighten people here, and make them more cautious than they would have been under other circumstances—that is, if no such epidemic were in existence. And after all," pausing in the act of writing out a prescription for a patient who had symptoms of the disease, "it is better that it should be so. The newspapers in treating the epidemic as if it were a matter of no consequence, and in some cases, in a humorous vein, have conveyed a wrong impression to the public. There is danger in any disease, no matter what. The only difference is in the degree, and in la grippe is that it is not taken in time; that busy men and women fight it off as long as nature will allow them to do so, only giving up when they discover they are unable to longer battle with it."

"Is there any way in which the disease can be avoided! Is there no preventive!"

"Well, to tell you the truth, I do not know. You see, the epidemic—the violent type, at least, has not reached us yet, and but few of the doctors of this city have had any experience with it. Speaking from my present knowledge, however, I should say that everybody is liable to have it."

"What are the symptoms:"

Just at that moment Doc Faust hove in sight. He was wrapped in a Canadian blanket overcoat and a sombre expression of countenance.

"Ask the doctor, there he are tell."

of countenance.

"Ask the doctor, there, he can tell you,"
and the medicine man turned away to com plete his prescription.
Faust pulled his 23x69 silk handkerchief away from his nose, and in answer to the reporter's query, "Have you had it?" he replied: "Had it for a week."

away from his nose, and in answer to the reporter's query, "Have you had it?" he replied: "Had it for a week."

"Well, what are the symptoms?"

"One's head feels as though he had been to Ogden on a Liberal ratification; one's breast as though Sullivan had ran against him with his good right hand; one's bones, as though he had paid a visit to a Donnybrook fair; one's stomach as though he had swallowed both Jonah and the whale; and a general idea flits through one's mind to the effect that he is merely walking around, or lying around, to save funeral expenses."

Another physician when asked about the epidemic, said: "It is commencing to assume

A VERY SERIOUS ASPECT.

I have a number of patients under my care, and all have the mild form only. As to the symptoms, they vary somewhat, although the disease usually commences with a chill, followed by fever, running at the eyes and nose and frontal headache. There is great soreness all over the body, and some subjects explain the pain by saying they feel as though they had been badly pounded. The great danger, especially in this altitude, I think, arises from the likelihood of the original malady running into pneumonia. When death ensues—but there have been no fatal cases in Sait Lake as yet—it is because the air passages become clogged with mucous. In other words, the patient smothers, in a similar manner as though he were under water. From my observation, weak persons, and those of a delicate constitution, inclined to lung diseases, are more apt to take it than others. I know of no preventive but usually recommend to those who fear the disease A VERY SERIOUS ASPECT.

I know of no preventive but usually recommend to those who fear the disease, small doses of quinine—a three-grain pill three times a day." AN EASTERN PHYSICIAN'S OPINION, An eastern physician, who has had cor An eastern physician, who has had considerable experience in fighting the disease, in a recent interview said: "The chief thing to do is for the patient to be tucked away comfortably in bed and remain very quiet. Get a the symptoms of the disease are manifest. J. W. SUMMERHAYS. R. MORRIS. W. H. BOWE the symptoms of the disease are manifest. Early treatment goes a great way. As a rule, I find that women and children re cover much sooner than men. This is easily accounted for by the fact that the children and women can be controlled and kept quiet in bed. Not so with the men. They po about their business as long as the stand on their feet, and moving around aggravates the disease. The disease does not take on the character of intermittent fever; but the fever is nextly steady theorem.

gravates the disease. The disease does not take on the character of intermittent fever; but the fever is pretty steady, though generally of short duration. It continues sometimes twenty-four hours only, and other cases the fever will hold up four or five days. This is owing to the physical condition of the patient when attacked.

"La grippe seems to be easily complicated with other diseases. Pneumonin more frequently develops after a serious case than any other complication. And when pneumonia follows, the patient may die within twenty four hours after its symptoms follow the grip. People, believing that the grip is not dangerous, go about the streets and expose thems lives while he symptoms are first shown. They may take as a recould by exposure, and a bad cold right now can easily develop into influenza.
